

Privacy Statement

You do not need to identify yourself in any way to use this website. You do not need to establish an account or “log in” to access and utilize any and every portion of this website. We do statistically monitor the use of our website for activity, but no I.P. addresses or personal information of any kind is ever received by us. If you visit an “Unaffiliated Website” listed on our “Resource Page” be aware that each of them have their own privacy policies that may differ from ours.

Should you chose to do so, you may indicate your presence by leaving a brief note in our “Guest Book,” or you may email us directly by clicking on the “Contact Us” button on our Home Page. Both require you to identify yourself by name. If you comment on one of our blogs we require that you identify yourself as a matter of courtesy to us and others who will also read your comment (see About: Blogs).

If you choose to purchase paperback copies of our books, you will be directed away from our website to our “Author Spotlight” Page at Lulu.com, our on-demand printer’s website. They will require your personal information, including a method of payment, in order to to print and ship your order. This is a business transaction between you and them; none of your personal information will be passed on to us.